A CHRONOLOGY OF CHILD ABUSE ALLEGATIONS IN NORTH WALES

2016 4th February	Keith Alan Evans, 71, found guilty of one of six original charges of historic child cruelty. The jury returned a majority verdict on a single count, which related to an offence committed against one boy during the 1980s. A unanimous not guilty verdict was returned against one remaining charge. He will be sentenced at Mold Crown Court on the week commencing March 14.
2016 17th February	Darren Richard Laverty arrested and charged with 'contempt of court' at Wrexham Magistrates Court after making a series of 'disgusting and malicious Tweets', prior to, during and following the sentencing hearing of a man Laverty had insisted was prosecuted for 'Malicious Communications' earlier that week. Laverty was removed from the court in handcuffs and taken to Wrexham Central Police station, where he was charged and held in custody until appearing before circuit Judge Gwyn Jones at the end of court business. After receiving a severe ticking off, Laverty 'apologised profusely' adding somewhat meekly that he was 'an extremely stupid man' and would at once comply with the judges instruction to immediately cease his unwarranted attacks on the convicted man. A series of handwritten notes that were taken during the court hearing by both Laverty and his wife, were seized by the North Wales Police and ordered to be destroyed.
2016 29th February	The trial of Aileen and Denis Jones from Seaford, East Sussex over accusations of abuse against two boys under the age of 16, between 1975 and 1980, begins at Mold Crown Court sitting at Chester and is expected to last two weeks.
2016 10th March	Aileen and Dennis Jones found not guilty of child cruelty charges at Chester Crown Court. Mrs Jones, was awarded an OBE in 2014 for her work as head of Southdown Housing Association, said: "Of all the things we could have been accused of it was the worst in the world – murder would have been lesser. This case should never have gone to court. All the evidence that contradicted the evidence was ignored." The case cost the couple their jobs as well as £100,000 in legal fees. Mr Jones said: "The main allegation was being made about 1973 to 1974, when we lived in Brighton and York and two years before we even moved to Wales. A simple check of our tax records would have shown where we were working at the time." Mrs Jones went on to say: "Children have been and are still being abused, but false accusations, and especially historic false allegations, divert resources away from keeping children safe today and undermines child protection. People who have been genuinely abused are further damaged by those who make false allegations."
2016 17th March	Keith Alan Evans, 71, convicted in February this year of a single count of child cruelty against a young boy in 1883, was sentenced to eight months in custody, suspended for a year. He was also fined £500 and ordered to pay £500 compassion to the victim. Evans is the seventh person to be convicted and sentenced following investigations by Operation Pallial. A redacted version of the Macur Report is finally published, which found: "No Reason to undermine the Waterhouse Inquiry findings." The report is soundly criticised by the NSPCC, who's Welsh chief Des Mannion said it: "Revealed barely anything". Keith Gregory, an ex-Bryn Estyn resident, who said he had been contacted by many distraught survivors who were upset by the findings, also blasted the report claiming: "It is a whitewash, a complete cover-up and has been a complete waste of time. All the court documents from the Waterhouse Inquiry were scrapped and it was said to be 'human error.' What the survivors are saying is that this was supposed to be a survivor-led inquiry, so why weren't they contacted? We feel like we have been kicked in the teeth and there is a feeling of 'here we go again'. We have lost 13 to suicide and I just hope that people remain strong now and that we carry on the battle."
2016 18th March	Lee Roberts aged 32, of Windsor Drive, Kinmel Bay jailed for six years after paying children abroad to engage in sex acts. Roberts told boys as young as 11 in the Phillipines what to do in highly sexualised chats over the internet and filmed what they were doing to each other and with older men.
